THE GAZETTE.

FRIDAY EVE NG., NOVEMBER 20.

MEN OF LETTERS. - Tasso's conversation was neither gay nor brilliant. Dante was either taciturn or sattrical. Butler was sullen or bitting. Gray seldom talked or smiled. Hogarth and Smith were very absent minded in company. Milton was very unsociable, and even irratable when pressed into conversation. Kirwin, though copious and elequent in public addresses, was meagre and duil in colloqual discourse. Virgil was heavy in conversation. La - Fontaine appeared heavy, course and stupid; he could not speak and describe what he had just seen; but then he was the model of poetry. Chancer's silence was more agreeable than his conversation. Dryden's conversation was dry and dull, his humor saturine and reserved. Corneille, in conversation, was so insipid that he never failed in wearying; he did not even speak correctly that language of which he was such a master. Ben Johnson used to sit silent in company and suck his wines and their humors. Southey was stiff, sedate and wrapped up in ascetteism. Addison was good company with his intimate friends, but in mixed company he preserved his dignity by a stiff reserved silence. Fox, in conversation, never flagged; his animation and variety were inexhaustible. Dr. Bently was loquacious; so also was Grotious. Goldsmith "wrote like an angel and talked like poor poll." Burke was entertaining, enthusiastic and interesting in conversation. Curran was a convivial deity. Leigh Hunt was "like a pleasant dream" in conversation. Carlyle doubts, objects and constantly demurs.
